Former Ambassador Declares Farmers Are Unorganized Industrially, Commercially and Financially and as a Result There Are Wastes - Agriculture Isn't on Decline, He Says.

Philadelphia.-Lack of organization is the chief trouble with American agriculture. Myron T. Herrick, formerly United States ambassador to France. recently said in an address before the agricultural conference. Mr. Herrick's topic was agriculture and the laws required for rural credits.

Mr. Herrick held that the farmers are unorganized industrially, commercially and financially and that, as a result, there are wastes and losses that seriously affect the producer's profits.

Mr. Herrick made it clear, however, that agriculture in this country was not on the decline. Man for man, he said, the American farmer is superior to any other, and in some branches he has brought agriculture to its highest stages of development. The shortcomings of American agriculture are traceable to the fact that the farmers have not combined their resources with the view of helping one another, he said Their greatest need, he declared, is cooperation, and this can be brought about only through a more intelligent and extended use of the association

He suggested that these legislative steps be considered to relieve condi-

First.-An amendment of the national banking act to permit any national bank that confines its credit facilities to members to be organized as an association without capital stock.

Second.-An amendment of the banking act of each state to permit any kind of bank that confines its credit facilities to members to be organized as an organization without capital

Third .- A law by the nation and in each state to legalize for associations whatever is lawful for corporation i. e., a regulatory law.

Fourth.-A clause in such law to permit combinations among farmers' associations or small producers' or consumers' associations.

"Such, in substance, are the basic principles of the laws in all countries where rural co-operation flourishes, said Mr. Herrick. "America is too set in the idea that the corporation or partnership is the only means for organizing business or finance and that the association is intended merely for benevolence, thrift and non-profit objects. There is also a widely prevalent idea that co-operation is of a similar nitruistic nature. We should disabuse our minds of these false ideas and put the association and co-operation on a practical, economic basis. "A system of co-operative associations based on co-operative banks is. in my opinion, the best solution of the troubles that beset American agriculture. The combined wealth and earning power of the farmers are so stupendous that they would become self sufficient if they would consolidate and mobilize their resources through such systems extending from the plains to tidewater. Experience proves that the organized farmer is able to take care of himself. The only way to organization lies through co-operation."

They had scoured the neighborhood for these Danderine is to the hair what fresh materials and had just completed what was to them the finest automobile in the world. Robert was the genius who had thought out the plan, while the others had helped to collect the materials and put them together. When they were ready to paint the machine their enthusiasm received a hard blow, for Robert's mother refused to allow them to play with the paint, fearing they would get it on their clothes and muss things generally. This was a bitter disappointment for the young genius. The father, seeing his son' disappointment and possessing more money than appreciation for productive qualities, caught the wrong inspiration, and the next day a new fifty-dollar toy machine was delivered into the boy's hands.

The old machine was made to a omodate three boys: the new carried but one. The old one needed to b painted and frequently repaired; the selfish use. The Alderman-Yehle Dry Goods Company, made extensive purchases at the Big St. Louis Sale, conducted by the Manufacturers, Jobbers and Specialty Houses of St. Louis. For years the large wholesalers and manufacturers of St. Louis have held an annual sale for the primary purpose of disposing of broken lots preparatory to taking inventory and righting stocks. This year our buyer was on the ground bright and early, and succeeded in securing some of the choicest lots of merchandise offered. To this we have added a quantity of our regular stocks and will hold this one week's sale preparatory to the arranging of our large Christmas stocks for which the other lines will be obliged to give way in order to make this the Christmas Store of Maryville.

The goods have all been assorted and arranged for easy selection and on Saturday morning we will begin a sale of seasonable, desirable merchandise that cannot fail to interest every economically inclined shopper in this vicinity. Below are listed a few of the special lots that are offered-many others have been arranged. Take our advice! Attend this Sale if you want the greatest value giving snaps of the year.

HERRICK URGES FARMERS' UNION

Lack of Organization Chief Agricultural Trouble.

PROFITS ARE AFFECTED.

Former Ambassador Declares Farmers Are Unorganized Industrially, Commercially and Financially and as a Result There Are Wastes - Agriculture Işn't on Decline, He Says.

Philadelphia.-Lack of organization s the chief trouble with American agciculture, Myron T. Herrick, formerly United States ambassador to France. recently said in an address before the agricultural conference. Mr. Herrick's topic was agriculture and the laws required for rural credits.

Mr. Herrick held that the farmers are unorganized industrially, commercially and financially and that, as a result, there are wastes and losses that seriously affect the producer's profits.

Mr. Herrick made it clear, however, that agriculture in this country wa not on the decline. Man for man, he said, the American farmer is superior to any other, and in some branches he has brought agriculture to its highest stages of development. The shortcor ngs of American agriculture are trace able to the fact that the farmers hav not combined their resources with the riew of helping one another, he said operation, and this can be brough about only through a more intelligen

First.-An amendment of the national banking act to permit any national bank that confines its credit facilities to members to be organized as an association without capital stock Second .-- An amendment of the bank ing act of each state to permit an kind of bank that confines its cred as an organization without capital

Third .- A law by the nation and in each state to legalize for associations whatever is lawful for corporations i. e., a regulatory law.

Fourth.—A clause in such law to permit combinations among farmers' associations or small producers' or consumers' associations.

Such, in substance, are the basic principles of the laws in all countries where rural co-operation flourishes,' said Mr. Herrick. "America is too se in the idea that the corporation of partnership is the only means for or ganizing business or finance and that the association is intended merely for benevolence, thrift and non-profit ob jects. There is also a widely prevalen idea that co-operation is of a simila aitruistic nature. We should disabuse our minds of these false ideas and put the association and co-operation on a practical, economic basis.

'A system of co-operative associa tions based on co-operative banks is in my opinion, the best solution of the troubles that beset American agricu ture. The combined wealth and earn ing power of the farmers are so stu pendous that they would become self systems extending from the plains t tidewater. Experience proves that the organized farmer is able to take care of himself. The only way to organization lies through co-operation."

By notifying the office, those having charge accounts may have merchandise purchased in this sale charged on their December bill -we invite responsible accounts.

The Big Before Christmas Sale

Begins Saturday Morning, November 27 Closes Saturday Evening, December 4

The Alderman-Yehle Dry Goods Company, made extensive purchases at the Big St. Louis Sale, conducted by the Manufacturers, Jobbers and Specialty Houses of St. Louis. For years the large wholesalers and manufacturers of St. Louis have held an annual sale for the primary purpose of disposing of broken lots preparatory to taking inventory and righting stocks. This year our buyer was on the ground bright and early, and succeeded in securing some of the choicest lots of merchandise offered. To this we have added a quantity of our regular stocks and will hold this one week's sale preparatory to the arranging of our large Christmas stocks for which the other lines will be obliged to give way in order to make this the Christmas Store of Maryville.

The goods have all been assorted and arranged for easy selection and on Saturday morning we will begin a sale of seasonable, desirable merchandise that cannot fail to interest every economically inclined shopper in this vicinity. Below are listed a few of the special lots that are offered-many others have been arranged. Take our advice! Attend this Sale if you want the greatest value giving snaps of the year.
